to persecute the Christians. On the authority of Tacitus, one reads that he lent his gardens for the spectacle and was the first to draw his imperial sword against the Christian sect and stain with blood the rising faith. The deaths of these miserable people were thus turned into mockery and the very night illuminated with the flames from their tortured bodies.

Bishop O'Connell dwelt specially on Bishop O'Connell dwelt specially on the artistic characteristics of these circus games. It was a magnificent show that the Emperor of all the Ro-mans gave for his people, with these desperate victims for actors. He was trained in art, and everything that he did was done in the most finished man-ner and with all the pomp and splendor and was done in the most finished manner and with all the pomp and splendor at his command. If a drama of this kind caught the fancy of and amused the people of Nero's realm, it must be necessarily of the most brilliant kind. The supply of victims in Rome was hardly equal to the demand for this artistic show, and they were brought from all parts of the then known world to make sport for the people, as others imported lions and other wild beasts for the combat in the circus. beasts for the combat in the circus.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Washington, March 24.—Representative Carlin has decided, according to a letter Carlin has decided, according to a letter which he gave out to-day, to try the experiment of woman suffrage in Virginia. The occasion for the experiment arose by virtue of vacancy in the presidential post-office at Purceliville, Loudoun County, and Mr. Carlin has written a letter, in which he fixed the time for the contest to begin at 12 o'clock to-day and to end at 12 o'clock April 1. The conditions of the contest are that the expression of the people must be obtained by petition, and that all white Democrat adult men and woman shall be counted. Mr. Carlin agrees to give his indorsement to the applicant receiving the largest number upon his petition. This is the most progressive step along the line of woman suffrage that has so far been taken in Virginia, and Mr. Carlin is eagerly awaiting the result, with a view to ascertaining whether the women really like the idea of participating in politics and determining controversics among men.
